

The Greatness and Goodness of Our God

Isaiah 40:21-31

Worship is an expression of _____ or high _____ for something to which we ascribe worth. What or whom we choose to worship is important because our lives are _____ by our worship. The Bible insists that we focus our worship on God _____.

Isaiah explains why God alone is worthy of our worship. God's greatness as _____ of heaven and earth is well-known and _____. Our God is the Great Creator.

Isaiah goes on to describe God's greatness in terms of His massive reach—theologians call it the _____ of our God. Isaiah then portrays God's greatness in terms of His power—His authority over and above all power and authority. Theologians call it _____. Finally, His greatness is exhibited in His intimate knowledge of the universe He created. Theologians call it His _____. Our God is Great!

What ultimately makes God worthy of our worship according to Isaiah is not just that He is great, but that He is _____—_____.

The God whose reach can spread out the universe like a tent is the same God who finds us in our broken, sinful condition, _____ us, and then uses that same reach to _____ our transgressions from us as far as _____.

The God whose power brings princes to naught and reduces the rulers of this world to nothing is the same God who holds us “_____” in His hands so that nothing will be able to _____ from the love of God that is in Christ Jesus our Lord.

The God who calls forth each star by name is the same God who know _____—knows you so intimately, that He has even the _____.

The first prayer I learned as a child was theologically _____: “God is _____, God is _____, let us thank Him for our food.”

My only adjustment would be, Let us _____ !